

Published by AsbestosClaims.Law
asbestosclaims.law/library/11592/1

[redacted]

We, the members of the Board of Directors, record with sorrow his death on February twenty-sixth, nineteen hundred [redacted].

He came to Johns-Manville in 1927. Two years later as a young man of thirty-five, he rose to the Presidency. Such has been the way of it in a country where many men would just be entering their period of highest accomplishment. Yet, long before, Lewis H. Brown already had exhibited the stature of greatness.

To pay tribute to the memory of this [redacted] leader who guided Johns-Manville through the most important years of growth and achievement in the history of our ninety-three-year old Company.

Through his knowledge, sincerity, understanding, dedication and courage, Lewis H. Brown became a symbol of progressive business management devoted to the common good. The Creed of Management which he developed sets forth the principles of modern enlightened capitalism in the human struggle for social justice and the welfare of the people. Johns-Manville today is a monument to his inspiring leadership.

As patriot and citizen he devoted his [redacted] energies to public service in war and in peace. He was honored by his country with the highest award that can be bestowed upon an American civilian.

For his warmhearted, wise and fearless leadership he earned the gratitude and respect of the men and women throughout the entire Johns-Manville organization.

We, the members of the Board of Directors of Johns-Manville Corporation salute with pride and affection the memory of Lewis H. Brown.

Our heartfelt sympathy goes out to [redacted] loved most -- to his wife Mary who gave him such [redacted] to the members of his family to whom he was so devoted. We pray that their grief may be lessened by their knowledge that Lewis H. Brown [redacted] a truly great man.

[redacted]
Johns-Manville Corporation