Dear Guy:

Enclosed is a copy of Barry Castleman's letter and my reply. He only asked for the literature review when it was complete, not the kind of material I gave Wendell Alcorn. Of course, I'd give him the literature review since this we hope to have published. I view the entire project as a scholarly endeavor financed by AIA in a search for the "truth" in the belief that the industry is being wronged by falsehoods. Obviously, it's a gamble on the part of AIA.

Actually, the literature review will contain all the important parts of the abstracts i.e. direct quotes expressing opinions. Moreover, with some work one could get back to the abstracts (by doing what we did). I don't think anyone would want to do this, however.

I haven't heard from Barry Castleman and don't see any real issue here. If I do, I'll call you.

Sincerely,

Philip E. Enterline, Ph.D.
